IN THE ORDER DRAWN

After an investigation, the Missourian finds that the draft numbers presented by this paper, and all other papers in Columbia, following the drawing, were wholly inaccurate on the most vital point—the order in which they were drawn. The news service, which sent the figures to the papers here, including the Missourian, failed to furnish them in the order drawn in Washington.

A comparison was made yesterday of the lists published in the St. Louis and Kansas City papers and it was found that all these papers have the numbers in the same order, and that the order differs throughout from that published in Columbia.

The list published this issue of the Missourian is taken from the city papers. By eliminating all numbers over 2,590, the total number registered in this county, an accurate list of those drawn—and of more importance, the order in which they were drawn—of one-half of those registered in this county, is given.

The quota for Boone County is 160. The number who will be called before the exemption board before this quota is reached is variously estimated. It is generally believed, however, that any person whose number was not drawn in the first 500 will not be called to make up the 160 who will help make up the new army.

Those men registered in Boone County can tell from today's Missourian list if his number comes in the first half of those drawn and whether or not he has a chance of going to war with the new army.

FIND LOST NUMBER AND FINISH DRAFT

Physical Examinations Will Be Next Step in Getting Army Together.

TO BE NO CHARGES

Work Has Been Managed So Chance of Question Is Practically Barred.

By United Press

WASHINGTON, July 21.—Provost Marshal General Crowder today announced he had located the one missing number in yesterday's drawing, and with this, America's great human lottery passed into history. Checking up on the sheets has been completed and the official list in printed and photographed form will be on the way to the exemption boards before nightfall. The great machinery of calling the country's young men for physical examination will be under way the first of the week.

Where and how the missing number was located was not disclosed, and Crowder said he could not recollect what the missing number was. With its location everyone went to bed and what names are hidden in the vagrant pellet will not be determined until the officials assemble and open the capsule today.

The Department of Justice is delving into every question touching up on the appointment and work of the exemption boards to see that absolutely no charge of illegality may be brought up against the draft.

Missing Draft Number Was 4,644.

By United Press

WASHINGTON, July 21.—With the location today of the missing number in the great draft lottery, Provost Marshal General Crowder notified Secretary of War Baker that the first step toward organizing the draft army had been completed. The missing number, 4,644, was assigned to the 1,004th place in the drawing—the point at which the blank had been picked from the urn.

A BIG DAY FOR MARRIAGES

Recorder Believes Draft May Have Affected License Demand.

County Recorder Henry issued six marriage licenses yesterday, a larger number than he has issued during all July thus far. All of the grooms except one are of draft age, and Mr. Henry thinks the draft is probably responsible for the increased popularity of his office.

Licenses were issued to: Richard Dennis and Miss Ruby Palmer, both of Columbia; Harley Torrance and Miss Nina Fox of Ashland; Robert Algeo and Miss Willie Stark, Columbia; Paul Cheavens, Columbia and Miss Susie Easley, Easley; Floyd McCray, Grimes, Ia., and Miss Elizabeth Warren, Centralia; Guy Anderson and Mabel Gregory, negroes.

By United Press

LONDON, July 21.—Since February 1 Germany claims to have sunk close to 4,750,000 tons of neutral and allied shipping, according to German official figures received today. The figures given were: February, 781,500 tons; March, 885,000 tons; April, 1,091,000 tons; May, 869,000 tons; June, "over 1,000,000 tons with a number of commanders' reports not yet received."

M. U. UNIT PASSED U-BOAT IN ATLANTIC

C. E. Kane In Letter Tells of Submarine Seen on Eve of July Fourth.

HELD MEET ON SHIP

Collins, Gardere, Kline and Gardner Starred in Races on Deck.

A submarine, a track meet, and the new University of Missouri yell, on an ocean liner in the Atlantic Ocean danger zone—these were some of the amusements of the University of Missouri Ambulance Unit, as told of in a letter just received by the Daily Missourian, from Charles E. Kane, former instructor in the School of Journalism of the University.

The Missouri unit, with units from Leland Stanford, Norton-Harjes, and the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, were "Somewhere in the danger zone," when the periscope of the only submarine seen, was seen. It ducked out of sight before the Rochambeau could swing around and bring its big gun into action. That, according to Mr. Kane, was the only real thrill of the trip.

His letter follows:

Somewhere in the Danger Zone, S. S. Rochambeau, July 3, 1917.

Tomorrow will be the 4th of July and this afternoon—eight full days from New York, this minute, the University of Missouri Unit of the American Ambulance Field Service is lining the rail with the other passengers—bad guess—not "mal-de-mer," just acting as volunteer lookouts for submarines. Due at Bordeaux tomorrow, we are in the nesting place of U-boats, and this noon one flitted its periscope at us about a mile off the port, but ducked out of sight before our rapid swing to the starboard could bring our big gun into action. We have two guns, a small one fore, a big one aft, and, like the Missouri mule, the average ocean liner prefers to do its hitting with its heels. This gives the liner a better chance to run away, too; and since the submarine is pretty slow and rather doubtful as to a safe place to come back to the surface, we have probably parted company by a considerable distance.

Well Prepared for Trouble.

Eight days of loafing and one real thrill. But there's lots of preparation for what might happen. The receipt of this letter will assure you again of our safe arrival, but you can rest assured also that much of our safety has been due to the unusual precautions which have been taken.

At night we are without lights, all the portholes being closed and even the smoking of cigars on the decks being forbidden. The lifeboats have been hanging over the side ever since we came into the danger zone. The crews are at the guns. The ship changes its course (zigzags), every few minutes. Lookouts are everywhere. Lifebelts are kept close at hand. Passengers have been advised to sleep in their clothes, and many of them last night took their rest on the promenade deck, in steamer chairs, and on the hatches on the forward deck. Tonight few will sleep in all probability; the scare of today will keep many awake, and there won't be much time if the ship is hit, for she is well loaded.

Besides—worst blow of all—the ambulance men have been advised not to wear their uniforms, as the Germans have been known to fire on lifeboats containing soldiers, consequently a

DRASTIC FOOD LAW PASSES SENATE BY VOTE OF 81 TO 6

Measure Is Now Ready for Signature of President Wilson Tomorrow Morning to Become a Law.

DEBATE ON BILL IS ENDED AT 2:30

Amendments for Control of Wheat and Coal Prices and for Anti-Hoarding Included in Measure.

By United Press

WASHINGTON, July 21.—The drastic Food Control Bill passed the Senate at 4 o'clock this afternoon by a vote of 81 to 6. The Senate rejected Herbert Hoover as America's sole food commissioner by voting down 60 to 23 Senator Shafroth's amendment providing for one man for the Food Board.

The wheat amendment, placing a minimum price on best grade wheat at $2 a bushel was passed.

Debate on the bill ended at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon. The new anti-hoarding amendment by Senator Kenyon was adopted. It punishes by imprisonment of from six months to three years any person in trade who hoards food to limit production or boost prices. Farmers and gardeners are not included.

An amendment by Senator Hollis of New Hampshire providing that the Food Bill shall not replace the anti-trust laws was included in the bill as passed. By a vote of 72 to 12 the Senate adopted the Pomerene-Cummins amendment empowering the President to take control of all coal in the United States at the mouth of the mines and gave the Federal Trade Commission authority to fix prices on it in every commercial transaction from producers to consumers.

The bill now requires only the signature of President Wilson to become a law.

Russians Obtaining Mastery of Enemy Near Vilna, a Report Says.
